Competency based training and simulation in healthcare education

We are excited to share this 3rd newsletter and present you the results of the blended mobility of the “Competency-Based Training and Simulation in Healthcare Education”, which was successfully hosted by PIVH in Hasselt, Belgium.

The event was attended by 36 students and teachers from all the project partners in the 6 countries: Denmark, Belgium, Turkiye, Spain, Portugal, and Romania.

The event offered the participants hands-on training in nursing simulation techniques, emphasizing essential skills to improve healthcare education, high-quality care, and patient safety. The program also integrated activities promoting the 17 SDGs and introduced, for the first time, a model of an e-portfolio.

WHAT HAVE WE DONE? LET'S SEE...

Day 1: The event kicked off with an introduction to the project scope and activities, followed by participant introductions and ice-breakers. The day continued with a detailed project presentation and a workshop on PraxManager 2.0. Participants created their personal development plans (PDP) for the week, and engaged in a reflective activity using the Circle of Korthagen, while also working on their portfolios.

Day 2: Participants worked in mixed groups, receiving training on the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). The day started with the students watching a short video, then they were given a challenge to work with, followed by practical activities and presentations of results. Reflection and portfolio work continued throughout the day.

Day 3: The group visited the neighboring college, where they received an introduction to simulation practices, followed by familiarization with the premises and facilities. Simulation activities took place in mixed groups, using the same scenario, with results presented and portfolio work continued.

Day 4: The students and the teachers took part in a simulation contest integrating selected SDGs, followed by the presentation of results and the work on the portfolios.

Day 5: The final day featured the presentation of personal development plans (PDPs), a reflective session, evaluations, and the awarding of certificates. The event concluded with a social activity: a visit to Brussels and the European Parliament.
